

Industry Alliance Member Application

Industry Alliance accreditation can be held by a company, association or individual, engaged in the supply of goods, materials, processes or services used in the practice of interior design. There are three general categories:

Industry Resource Member

Industry Resource Membership can be held by companies, and in extraordinary cases individuals, engaged in the supply of goods and/or materials used in the practice of interior design. This membership may only be held by firms where specified services are provided directly and not by an associated company or division of the firm.

Residential Retail Member

Residential Retail Membership can be held by a company that supplies products to the residential market while providing a contract pricing structure to the design profession.

Service Member

Service Membership may be held by a business or individual that offers services and/or materials, or where the business is the installation or maintenance of product, materials or services to the interior design profession.
